Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

3. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

4. Claims 1 and 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yutaka (JP2002/137225, of record, and partial machine translation) in view of Akio et al. (JP2001/089021, of record, and partial machine translation).

Art Unit: 1791

5. Yutaka teaches a method and apparatus for removing dissimilar material from a plastic product wherein a plastic product is placed on a seat unit (holder 12) and a punching device is moved up and down to complete separate the dissimilar materials (see figures 7-9). Regarding the use of a blade unit, the machine translation of Yutaka describes the punching part as an edged tool which pierces the plastic article (paragraph 0009) and the part is described in paragraph 22 as having a "knife angle". An edged tool with a knife angle edge for piercing material would constitute a blade unit.
6. Yutaka does not teach a method or apparatus wherein the working unit is located below the seat unit and blade unit. In the same field of endeavor of apparatus for separating dissimilar material, Akio et al. (hereinafter Akio) teach an apparatus wherein the working unit (control part 14) is located near the base board 11 of the device for the purpose of fall prevention (paragraph [0022]). Placing a weighted working unit as described by Akio would lower the center of gravity for the apparatus and thus make it less susceptible to falling over. Thus, it would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to place the working unit of Yutaka at the base of the apparatus as taught by Akio for the purpose of providing greater stability to the apparatus.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Iwamoto et al. (PGPub 2004/0149096) disclose an apparatus wherein an inner core of plastic material is punched out with a bladed unit (figure 15).
